

Linking Bristlecone Pine Chronologies and Global Climate Events

Matt Saltzer

Bristlecone pine tree-ring chronologies from western North America are absolutely dated to the calendar year and extend for millennia. Chronologies from the upper treeline are well suited for recording past global-scale climate-events such as large climatically-effective volcanic eruptions. Here we report the latest findings from three separate Great Basin mountain ranges for the third Millennium BC.